Welcome to voice lessons! I hope to help improve your voice while helping you gain further knowledge and understanding of the vocal instrument. I will expose you to different repertoire and technical styles so you have a good overall sense of vocal language. I will be honest with you about what I hear as you sing and give you valid insights into how you are best able to enhance your vocal abilities. It is imperative that you be present (both mentally and physically) and prepared for each lesson.

Materials

Please bring to every lesson:

- A pencil (not a pen)
- A three ring binder dedicated to your vocal studies
- A laptop, phone, or other recording device
- Water to hydrate yourself

Practicing

Daily practice is necessary for the full benefit of lessons. The amount of time spent in the practice room varies from individual to individual. I recommend thirty minutes about 3-5 days a week. The important thing is that each minute of practice be used carefully with complete concentration of thought. Fifteen minutes of careful practice is worth more than one hour of just singing. I will try to always be clear about your vocal goals and how the exercises I give you will help you reach them. It's your responsibility to practice and make that happen! You know your body more than anyone, so don't push yourself too hard, but don't limit yourself! Music is a privilege, not a chore!

Sick?

If you are highly contagious, please stay home. I am an active performer, and I can't afford to get sick. Please take care of yourself by getting rest, hydrating and minimum speaking. Vocal health is extremely important!
